

5.3.2 Institution facilitates students' representation and engagement in various administrative, co-curricular and extracurricular activities (student council/ student's representation on various bodies as per established processes and norms)

PCE promotes student representation and engagement in various administrative, co-curricular, and extracurricular activities. The Student Council serves as the primary platform for student leadership, representing student interests in academic, cultural, and policy-related matters. Every year new student's council members are selected on the interview basis. Students are also appointed to key institutional committees, including Academic Council, IQAC, DAB, PAC, board of studies and cultural committees, ensuring their voices in decision-making.

The institution conducts various co-curricular and extracurricular opportunities, including clubs, societies, and annual events like Aarohan, Adhaar, Hostel Fest and many more. These activities foster leadership, creativity, and team-building skills among students. Clear guidelines for student engagement ensure fairness and transparency in election selection process and committee functions, with training provided to student leaders on leadership and decision-making.

PCE emphasizes diversity and inclusivity, ensuring equal representation of all student groups, including minorities and students with disabilities. Regular meetings between student representatives, faculty, and administration allow for open communication, while feedback mechanisms help refine student engagement processes. Our commitment to continuous improvement enables students to contribute meaningfully to institutional development, enhancing their personal growth and preparing them for future leadership roles.
